

Just to follow my last email, they should also be referencing the technical drawing attached, which indicates the sunlight received to the panel and the level of change (basically none).