

St Faith's Church Hall
(Also Known as 'Pallant House' part of the 'Pallant Centre')
Heritage Statement.

Statement from the Parochial Church Council

St Faith's House was acquired by the parish in the early years of the 20th century, for use as a community facility. Over the succeeding century, it has provided a number of functions to the local community, including being a club for young men (complete with snooker tables and 'smoking rooms') a day nursery, a café, a folk-club venue, a suite of meeting rooms, offices for the parish and other charities (e.g. SSAFA, who have had an office in the building for over 30 years) and a charity shop.

The house was extensively refurbished in the 1950s, using non-period materials. Its heritage value is therefore only as an external structure.

As a community facility, of long-standing, the PCC believes that it is essential to offer a useable, warm, all-year-round environment to our many different user groups. For its entire history, heat and catering facilities has been provided by a rag-tag assortment of electrical, calor gas and other heating appliances along with third hand kitchen units and inadequate catering facilities.

We now propose to modernise our provision by upgrading the heating system and kitchen to include wet fed radiators, a boiler and new modular stainless steel units.

The boiler we have specified needs to exhaust through a 4 inch flue. With a consideration for ventilation and extraction, the only practical position for the boiler (given water and gas supplies) is in the position shown on the site plan.

Fixing

The proposed flue will be fitted to a neatly made hole through the external wall of the building (in the position shown on the site plan). The surrounding brickwork will be made good to match.

Conclusion

The PCC believes that the flue (and boiler system) proposed for the Pallant Hall balances the need to provide adequate heating for community users, while preserving the over-all antique feeling of the building and provide instant hot water for cleaning and catering facilities and opportunities.
