Hi Jennie

The revised plan, whilst closer to the approval, still incorporates a large area of additional land within the red line that was never shown as forming part of the application site, so my reservations about the situation remain.

Your latter sentence would it be better if we just changed the approved drawing to show a rear access gate leading to the tunnel is I think the appropriate approach as it is anticipated under Condition 7 and could be dealt with by way of a discharge of condition application, and such would be far simpler for all concerned.

Kind regards
