Dear Lewis

Thank you for your email.

I'm disappointed that you didn't consider our property close enough to be consulted, even though we are ... [REDACTED]

I don't see why permission should be granted for taller side dormers to be flush with roof ridge, given the ridge height is already too high.

I am happy for you to publish my email with redacted personal details.

Regards

Dear Mr Ford

I have received a letter referring to an appeal about a planning application for the above address.

I'm not sure why we have been sent this letter as the property has already been completed and we were never informed of the plans in the first place, even though it's [REDACTED].

I'm not sure why planning permission was given in the first place given it has raised the height of the building well above that of all the other building in this road, which are mainly of a similar build and it has been rebuilt with four dormers changing it from a bungalow to a two story house making it out of character with the buildings around it, so rather than sending a letter about any appeals, you should be asking why planning permission was given in the first place.
