Dear Ms Donophy,

Planning Application APP/21/00930 Temporary Buildings Northney Marina, Northney Marina, Hayling Island

Thank you for your consultation. The Northney Marina site is associated with records of a Bronze Age hoard and buried archaeology relating to harbour edge prehistoric activity. Ground works in this area may have archaeological implications. The nature of any foundation of these temporary buildings is not clear, but as far as I can tell it seems that the buildings will sit directly onto the existing hard surface (with only some soakaway as ground works). If this is the case I would not raise any archaeological issues.

However if clarification could be sought and it is not the case, and if substantive groundworks are implied, then I would be grateful for the opportunity to comment further in the light of those ground work details,

Yours sincerely
