

Dear Planning Services,

We have just noted that amended plans have been submitted of which we have not been formally advised. We note what the amendments are but we consider these to be relatively minor and do not alter at all our previous views and objections to the whole development being overbearing in respect of visual impact and loss of privacy. We have already recently have had to put up with an unsightly garage type building being erected very close to the boundary (whatever its intended use is yet to be?) and right opposite the rear of our house and facing us directly is the large apex of the rear of this building in brilliant white plastic which results in a very strong glare in the AM sunlight, are there any regulations as to the type of materials that can only be used in such buildings? As mentioned previously the depth of our rear garden is but a mere 11 metres.

We would be grateful for your comments before a final decision is reached on this proposed development.

Further to our earlier note (your letter dated 2 June received since) we now have observed on perusing the amended plans that there is the addition of two velux windows to the rear which along with the extra pitch to the roof does in our opinion add to the aspect of being even more overlooked.

Yours sincerely,

Paul & Angela Hourigan.
