For pedestrians crossing what would become a busy access road to the surgery, would cause extra pollution and safety issues to them.

The surgery itself is very secluded at present and the windows are open to let air circulate. With the noise of extra traffic and noise from industrial units, this would be less likely to happen which goes against all current advice of leaving windows open to allow air to circulate to help prevent infections. If Portsmouth Water wish to build new offices, build them adjacent to Solent Road but with a separate road access of Solent Road. Why do we need yet more industrial units when boardmarsh has the potential for more and various sites along New Lane In Havant have the capacity. I firmly object to the current application.

Reasons for comment:

Comments: It is no appropriate for a Doctors Surgery to have a shared entrance with industrial or office traffic. It is difficult to turn into the access road from the Havant end as it is due to the high volume of traffic using Solent Road for industrial access to boardmarsh and retail access to the tesco, MARKS and Spencer etc.
