

Dear Mrs McMurray,

APP/16/00213 93: Sea Front, Hayling Island: Rear sun room and balcony, front two storey porch and full external cladding

Thank you for your consultancy. The site is located in area that was extensively militarised during the Second World War, with a series of defensive systems constructed, some elements of which still survive while as yet unrecorded elements may have survived as sub-surface features within the development area. There is also some potential for prehistoric activity in the area as a Bronze Age hoard has been recorded around 90 metres to the east of the site. Despite this archaeological potential however, the small scale of ground works associated with the proposed development means that it is unlikely that interpretable archaeological features would be exposed during construction of the new extensions. As a result of this I would not wish to raise any archaeological issues in this instance.

Yours sincerely,

Neil J. Adam BA ACIfA
