Hello Daphney,

I've now visited 29 Farriers Way.

The proposed extension would make the footpath feel very enclosed at the point where the extension abuts the footpath; there is a lamp column close to this point which would brighten the area after dark.

The extension would also restrict visibility along the footpath, currently the boundary treatment is topped with trellis which allows a view across the corner.

There would also be some restriction of visibility of the footpath from the upstairs rooms of 4 and 5 (some distance) 27 and 28 Farriers Way. However there is still fair overlooking of the footpath.

A smaller extension or perhaps one stepped back would provide some visibility along the footpath and make the footpath feel less enclosed.

Regards,

Stuart

Stuart

Planning permission has recently been refused for a 2 storey extension at the above site. One of the concerns was that the extension extended up to an adopted footpath and would have adversely impact the setting making the path less open. The property has a fairly large side garden and I think there is scope to do some size of extension, and would welcome your views from a Crime Prevention point of view. Please see the link below to the Council's web site, and in particular the site plan shows the location of the footpath relative to the site.

If the extension were to be set back 1m from the main front 2 storey wall and no less than 1m from the path at the side would you anticipate any issues from a crime prevention point of view?

I look forward to hearing your comments - many thanks
