Dear Mr Toole

We are still strongly opposed to this proposal. The supporting comments received, produced at the last minute (6/7th July) at the closing date, were probably from detached properties, not attached and not directly affected, as we are, with adjoining roof structure and overlooked by proposed overbearing dormers.

The additional front dormer windows are more in keeping, than the over large, poorly designed rear dormers, more suitable for a bungalow!
With the extra two windows at the South facing front of the property, there is more than adequate natural light, are the over large rear dormers really necessary?

We consider the design to be displeasing, prominent and permanently ugly.

The DIY, self-adhesive, one-way mirror film, as recently used on the first floor windows, will not be acceptable. The obscure (frosted) glazing must be manufactured for the purpose. This glazing should also be a requirement for the garage windows which look directly onto our windows and private space.

We are still concerned about the impact on our adjoining roof structure, now and in the future and will be seeking professional structural and legal advice.

Yours Faithfully
