Dear Mrs. McMurray,

I am writing to object to the proposed conversion of Barclays Bank in Emsworth to a Costa Coffee.

The whole town has a unique atmosphere consisting of individual shops with welcoming assistants and there are already enough coffee shops (I think four) which cater adequately for the public. A national chain such as Costa is more suited to large cities with changing customers not a regular clientele as we have now.

I am sure it would be possible to find a more suitable occupier which would blend in with the existing shops and residences as Emsworth is one of the treasures of England.

Yours sincerely,
