Comment Reasons:

Comment: I would like to comment on behalf of my mother and father-in-law who live next door to the proposed development.

[REDACTED] They spend most of their time sitting by their patio doors looking out at their lovely garden. The side wall of the proposed extension will severely cut out light from their dining room and will have a large impact on their view. My father-in-law will be looking at a brick wall. They are perfectly happy and content and at their age would not wish to rearrange this room even if it were possible. My mother-in-law loves her plants and is most concerned about the ones next to the extension where the new wall is to be erected. Will these shrubs remain in situ? They paid for superior fencing last year and I understand that two of the panels are to be removed. Is this necessary and will they be reimbursed if so? Will contractors need access to their garden? They are both lovely people and although understand that their neighbours wish to extend, they are both upset and worried about what this proposal is going to mean to their quality of life in the future how ever long that may be. If this permission is granted it will mean a change for them and at their time of life is not a desirable thing for their peace of mind or health.
