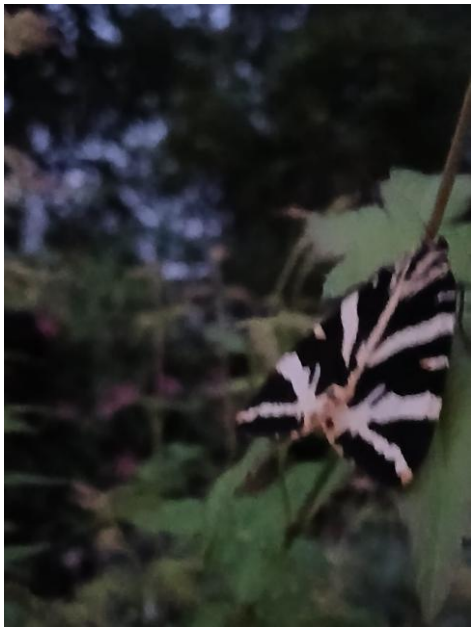
Hi.

Sorry to trouble you, but I finally managed to take a photo (attached) of a Jersey Tiger Moth at the bottom of our garden at (REDACTED), late on Friday evening.

I thought you may be interested as whilst investigating what it was I read that it has been designated as a `priority species` under Anex11 of the habitats directive in the European Union, and as of 1992 this means that areas in which it occurs can be declared `special areas of conservation`.

The reason for mentioning this is that there is an ongoing planning application (APP 26/00332, Development at Padnell Grange) for the land at the bottom of my garden which includes the devastation of the current wildlife habitats.

I hope this email is of some interest.


Have a good week, regards
